e Commissioner's Resignation Accepted with Alacrity.

Still Maintains it's Position was the Right One

Spite of the President's Failure to Support.

McAuliffe-Carney Mill Declared a Draw.

Sparks' Office Vacant

Washington, November 16.—Commissioner Sparks this morning received from [illegible] a letter [illegible] tendering his resignation [illegible] yesterday and which [illegible] to-day. The letter [illegible] the President to [illegible] the press the courtesies and [illegible] extremely kind [illegible] has expressed [illegible] yes, [illegible] best appreciation of his [illegible] to the country as commissioner [illegible] the general land office.

I still [illegible] my slave just released [illegible] the commissioner said [illegible] for [illegible] that I am indeed sick I would [illegible] rest of [illegible] of course." He [illegible] got a personal ending [illegible] administration and when I reflect [illegible] I have given nearly three years [illegible] most intensely hard brain racking [illegible] to the cause of the people [illegible] little more than my bread, when [illegible] I am at least 5,000 times [illegible] than I was on the day I came [illegible] Washington and when I review my [illegible] of the last three years and [illegible] know my course has been a [illegible] and honest one, and that [illegible] justice to the case at [illegible] unquestionably correct, when [illegible] think of all these things, with [illegible] consciousness of having done my [illegible] duty fearlessly, "I cannot help [illegible] it were otherwise. Yet I can by means unhappy," said the commissioner "I need rest and I shall remain in Washington during the remaining winter [illegible] take it easy."

Assistant Commissioner Stockslager will [illegible] Commissioner until Sparks' [illegible] is appointed.

A Drawn Battle.

Boston, November 16.—The Carney-McAuliffe fight was planned to take [illegible] Music Hall last evening at a sub- [illegible] resort about ten miles from Bos- [illegible]. The chase of outside sporting men [illegible] to show that the men and their backers were unable to shake them off, and it was necessary to postpone the fight several hours later. Preparations for the fight after the first failure to bring the men together were managed [illegible] and quietly until within a day [illegible] two. During the last forty eight hours [illegible] and on the cars men talked [illegible] fight. Every sporting man knew that [illegible] o'clock was the hour selected for the [illegible] and that it was [illegible] a few miles of Boston. When [illegible] party arrived at the place first selected the crowd was there before them [illegible] place was then changed and at one [illegible] stopping [illegible] entered the ring [illegible] a barn attached to the Atlantic hotel [illegible] Revere beach.

In the first round McAuliffe forced the fighting and by his rushes forced Carney [illegible] three times either by his weight [illegible] rough ships. In the fifth round [illegible] and on a feint got to short [illegible] and did great damage to Jack's [illegible] eye. The Brooklyn boy did great [illegible] and Carney's face was visited frequently. From the fifth to the [illegible] round Carney increased his advantage [illegible] and McAuliffe was terribly punished. From the touch to the twenty-second round the fighting was of a desperate character but slow, neither man being [illegible] punished. The battle was of [illegible] description and the [illegible] was wildly excited. The twenty-second took one hour and twenty-[illegible] minutes, and although McAuliffe [illegible] the best of it at that time, [illegible] terrific slugging was [illegible] fight. The betting was then in favor [illegible] McAuliffe, 2 to 1.

[illegible] Carney's backers were in accord [illegible] with the expressed intentions [illegible] Carney and McAuliffe and another [illegible] was made. McAuliffe forced the fighting [illegible] Carney's backers [illegible] that friends of the latter [illegible] Carney was sure to win. Carney's [illegible] determination was to make [illegible] a long desperate and murderous fight. He carried out [illegible] At the forty fifth round it was [illegible] Carney were found to be [illegible] in spite of the splendid staying [illegible] of McAuliffe. The Brockton [illegible] was full of pluck and stood up [illegible] punishment in great shape as long [illegible] had enough life in his body to hold up [illegible] and on his feet. At the [illegible] of that round it was seen that it was [illegible] question of time and that Carney [illegible] a winner.

[illegible] Carney and McAuliffe had [illegible] hands. The 50th was deeper [illegible]. Both men were strong [illegible] were able to fight two hours more. [illegible] with Carney and [illegible] Carney was the favorite at [illegible]. At the 53d round Carney [illegible] McAuliffe down and the spectators [illegible] into the ring and [illegible] the seconds and ropes. A [illegible] followed and the referee declared the fight a draw.

[illegible], November 16.—Carney is [illegible] a few miles of Boston. Southern papers are repudiating the absurd sentiments expressed by General Henry Jackson. The Memphis Avalanche, of its every issue, in which occurs a speech, with these words

General Jackson knows that with a few living exceptions, the people of the south were not only forced to understand that they could not succeed, but that all the concession asked was withdrawal out of the union, that upon this they neither to these or possible, nor would they attempt it under any circumstances even if they saw it could be done

The facts stated may be startling to be told to the northern states must do it themselves. And when they are ready to try the experiment hundreds of their friends of southern soldiers, the veterans of the world-famous, and their sons will try and convince them with powder and ball, if in no other way, of their mistake

To use an expressive bit of slang: Give us a rest!

Last Sunday the Independent Presbyterian church of Savannah, by a vote of 58 to 111 refused to make the Reverend Leonard Woolsey Bacon its permanent pastor. The objection to him came from his Fourth of July sermon in which he made a comparison between Lee and Lincoln. In political questions he was of strong northern sympathies and had the courage of his convictions. The opposition was not from ex-confederates who had achieved any distinction. Members of his church, like General Lawton, minister to Austria, General Alexander and Colonel Olmstead, who had distinguished themselves by their devotion to the confederate cause up to the close of the war, were strong partisans of Mr. Bacon. If Dr. Bacon would permit it there would probably be a division in the church, but he counsels harmony. The fact that so many distinguished ex-confederates support Mr. Bacon is conclusive evidence that while he may have been loyal to his northern sentiments, he did not express them obtrusively or offensively. The affair is rather unfortunate taken in connection with the speech of General Jackson and other southern episodes of the same character.

First-of-it we announced the sad news of the death of the Hon. Ianthus Bentley. His active participation in local affairs for the last six years, and his large and intimate acquaintance make his loss a great one in this community. He came here from Washington Pennsylvania, where he had a brilliant career as an attorney. When only about thirty years of age he was elected district attorney in his judicial district and served two terms. But poor health compelled him to abandon his large practice and come to Colorado. At first he entered the abode business, but after three years experience he resumed the practice of law. In 1882 he was elected justice of the peace. In 1884 he was elected city attorney and served until he entered the council in 1885. He remained a member of this body until this spring. While practising law in this city, he was far from strong, but for this reason never assumed the high position which his talents and knowledge of law entitled him to. Some of his brief addresses to the court and jury will be remembered as more brilliant than any of his contemporaries have made. He was deeply interested in and paternal for sons and few were later employed to grasp and discuss them. He was connected with several enterprises here, where he wielded a strong and beneficial influence. Few men in his days of condition have been able to impress the qualities on a community as he did. To his family and others whose loss will be greatest we tender our sympathy in their great loss.

The march for seats yesterday for the concert to be given to night over 1,000 applications. The officers of the Women's Auxiliary at first determined to have only as many tickets given out as there were seats. But finding so many people had had more applications than there were seats for, they decided to issue all their tickets and it was declared there would be none left over in the rooms. And again when the doors is put on sale to-day to those who do not have tickets for them, and it was supposed that a good deal of this would be sold. But practically all who bought seats on the project intend to go and there were not enough seats to go around yesterday. Such trouble was wholly unnecessary and unwarranted and contrary to the previous experiments of the same character in this city. The management knew the capacity of the house and was prepared to accommodate as much as possible. There are plenty of seats left and all who want to go to the concert can do so. The Women's Auxiliary have done a good work in this matter and deserve the success which will attend the concert to-night.

Mr. Sargent of Boston, has just returned from Washington. He has carried out in his office the principles of civil service reform, much to the disgust of his party. For this reason, his account of his visit [illegible] with Cleveland [illegible]

[illegible] Boston [illegible] any change can't be made that would make the situation worse. There are woolen manufacturers in this country with a million dollars invested in a plant who are scarcely making or losing out of business. Many of these industries are so large that a change in the tariff to help them would, perhaps be justified. But [illegible] pay any tax on wool and woolen goods longer if the only result is to raise the price of clothing, without materially assisting.

If there should be no change in the tariff—the question may resolve itself into simply this: that the people have a surplus of one hundred millions or more. The surplus is the income tax on whisky. The people pay far more for drink. The [illegible] a tax on luxury [illegible] of luxury to pay on [illegible]. The reduction in the price of [illegible] would simply mean that more whisky would be used. It would be a benefit [illegible] to the families of those who now [illegible] it. It would be a benefit [illegible] to make the cost of whisky greater. Some time ago, we made a statement that the tax on whisky amounts of drunkard and [illegible] the above which [illegible] five thousand dollars [illegible] of 1880, would [illegible] twenty-five thousand [illegible] public [illegible] for [illegible] would produce four [illegible] which would give to [illegible] five thousand [illegible] thousand dollars for [illegible] If this were [illegible] in the [illegible] in proportion to the [illegible] axis of this [illegible] would [illegible] burdens to each [illegible] For all taxes under [illegible] dants a penalty for [illegible] looking for [illegible] eminent purposes [illegible] According to the [illegible] the cities of [illegible] upward and [illegible] fifty thousand [illegible] would not be felt [illegible] It would [illegible] the house or [illegible] possess of [illegible] ing up points [illegible] to the whole [illegible] sort as part of [illegible] and up a [illegible] material which [illegible] ...ssibility for [illegible] towns by [illegible] controversy over the [illegible] others.

But [illegible] plan will not [illegible] this material [illegible] sale to all the [illegible] country. Assuming [illegible] sial on sugar [illegible] and produce about one [illegible] per capita. In the country in which Colorado [illegible] is found there are [illegible] by five hundred people. [illegible] give to its [illegible] other [illegible] buildings, [illegible] funds for [illegible] six [illegible] this [illegible] Three [illegible] all [illegible] sum [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
